

I agree/disagree with the given statement that "honesty is an important characteristics in doing business".
If I am an honest person, I can gain trust from my clients. As long as [If] I am always honest and do not lie, people trust me more, and it becomes easier for me to do business. For example, I'm serving as a project manager for the development of new software. Many people from multiple companies are involved. During the project, my team member made a big mistake, but I explained about it honestly, apologized, and made up for the mistake. As a result, I could gain trust, and eventually, the project ended up a great success. I know many collogues who had the same experience. As seen in this example, I have no doubt that "honesty is very important in business".
